Taunton City Council Taunton is a city in Somerset, England, United Kingdom, part of South West England. According to 2011 Census, Taunton has a total population of 134,435 compared to 139,397 in 2001. The area of Taunton is, the population density is. History Roman name Taunton is the capital of the Duchy of Somerset, and also the largest city in the county. The city is named after a town in modern-day France, Taonon in Latin and Touvrin in Old French. Medieval period The original Saxon settlement was superseded by a Saxon burh, with Saint Peter's Church (formerly a chapel) as the centre. Taunton was granted in April 1279 the status of a Chartered Town. This enabled the Mayor to enact his own laws, distinct from those of Somerset, which might be the origin of the present city's Quaker and German pilgrim communities. In 1299 Henry III granted Taunton, the city of Audley and the Castle of Worcester, to John Giffard, Baron of Longueville, in what was probably an informal agreement. In 1293, John Giffard's third son, Gervaise de Longueville, gained the rights to Eglwold as a hereditary barony and which came to be known as the City of Longueville. Longueville subsequently went on to inherit the Norman castles of Bushey and Newbury in Berkshire, making him a baron of England. The best part of Longueville's estate was incorporated into the City of Taunton. Taunton was granted a Royal charter in 1316, a gild in 1381 and became one of the first towns in England to have a Mayor in the late 15th century. It also has a unique record in that in 1421, a group of townsmen gathered in the market place to proclaim their own version of the Magna Carta which included a ban on the control of the death penalty. In 1423 the Mayor and his council eventually ratified this in their own version of the Magna Carta, which was finally printed in London in 1481. 15th century to present From the 15th century the ancient timber ringwork of the castle was removed and replaced by a large walled structure with a first-floor hall, providing the nucleus of the present day

: Never ask a woman if she is going to replace her tampon. She will be busy complaining about the pain of an unplanned period in the future. B: Not to ask any kind of 'first date question'. Many women feel like there is something horrifying and invasive about asking about where they are in their cycle. They should already know what their due date is so it's not like they have to make a guess. C: Don't ask a woman how far along she is in her pregnancy. She will be horrified that you didn't know she was pregnant. And no matter how much you explain you're not a doctor, you don't care, you don't know what you're talking about, she will be sure to remind you anyway. D: Never ask someone how far along they are in their pregnancy. The patient can feel like they have to explain the baby isn't even a baby yet. E: Never ask a woman if she has reached menopause. Menopausal women are afraid it will give them cancer. And you're like, 'you're still going to have periods'. F: Never ask a woman if she is on the pill. She will feel like she has to explain the whole 'we don't want to have sex, because I have to use a condom, it just feels wrong' thing again. G: Unless your girlfriend is actually having a miscarriage, which is a big deal and something you should try to catch, don't ask her if she is going to miscarry. She will be really offended that you didn't already know. H: Don't ask a pregnant woman how far along she is in her pregnancy. She will love it, and you will be forced to acknowledge how hard it is for her to be pregnant. I: Never ask a pregnant woman what stage of pregnancy she is. She'll be happy to tell you she's 9 months pregnant, but you will feel like you're a moron. J: Don't ask a woman about her actual due date, she will be a wreck because she thinks you're going to fire her if she's late K: Don't ask a pregnant woman how far along she is in her pregnancy. She will be happy to tell you how far she is, but you will be a racist. L: Don't ask a woman how much she is going to have to pay for a doctor's visit. If you
